Grade 3-6 The ten Rosso children desperately want a pet, but their mother's firmest rule is "No pets. Ten kids is enough." How they finally succeed makes for a somewhat predictable but good-natured story. One chapter is devoted to each child in the family, giving readers a brief and often telling insight into each character.

Bainbridge, the next kid in line, got the second name on the B page of the boys' half, and so on down the line. One of the Rossos' many house rules that no pets are allowed, because ten kids is enough, much to the dismay of the younger Rossos. They're especially upset about this when they leave their crowded apartment in New York City for a farm in New Jersey.
